I opened my phone general newsfeed just now and I probably don't have to explain to you that there was not one positive article listed. Just turn on the TV news or check out the latest on Google and you'll see loads of strife in this world. All the conflict makes me want to run and hide.

Where can you find peace when society is in a continual state of controversy?

While it can seem challenging to discover peace anywhere, the problem is not that peace can't be found. "Just look harder," someone suggests. I don't think the issue is that we need to look harder. I see folks all around me who are searching for peace with all their might. They're putting in everything they've got and still not finding it. No, the problem is that we're often looking in the wrong place. Because true peace can't be found in a place. Perfect peace is found in the person of Jesus Christ.
